

About Aranda de Duero

Aranda de Duero is located in the south of the province of Burgos, Spain. It has a population of roughly 32,000 people.

Aranda de Duero is the capital of the Ribera del Duero wine region. The town is unique for having wine cellars that interconnect below the streets of the town center. Wine clubs celebrate special events in these cellars.

Roseburg Aranda Connection (RAC)

Our History

The Sister City Program has its roots in a 1986 exchange of students between Joseph Lane Middle School and a school in Shobu, Japan. That exchange program continues today.

In 1993, the adult exchange program began and out of that, the Roseburg Sister City Program was birthed.

Following Shobu, Aranda became Roseburg's second sister city. The cities of Roseburg and Aranda have carried out an informal sister city relationship for the last four years. But in January 2007, the City of Roseburg officially adopted a Spanish Sister City, Aranda de Duero.

Similar to Roseburg's climate, Aranda de Duero is a small, winegrowing town in the Burgos region of Spain, Europe. The region is also known for its famous dairy and timber industry.

Our Mission

Our mission is to promote friendship and understanding between our country and Spain.

The Sister City agreement allows Roseburg and Aranda to assist each other culturally, educationally, and economically.
